

◀ GLIDECAM HD-2000

I got a first look at the excellent Glidecam HD-2000 at this year's NAB show, where I was impressed by how exceedingly fast it was to set up and balance without any tools, especially when compared to many other stabilization systems I've used that can be complicated to configure and take a lot of practice to use correctly. A stabilization system is an absolute necessity when using video-capable DSLRs that are so prone to rolling shutter, also known as "jelly motion," and the HD-2000 is a fine choice at a relatively affordable price.
